

An Elderly Lady is Up to No Good by Helene Tursten

Tursten has written two tiny, delightful books that Eureka PLD is excited to own. Both feature “an elderly lady” who happens to create a great deal of mischief and murder.

In An Elderly Lady is Up to No Good, Maud, in her upper 80s, has little time left in life for things that annoy or inconvenience her. While Maud is still of good health and has a sound mind, she has no issue with playing up her age to get what she wants, or needs, even if it involves murder. Taking on a noisy neighbor, finding ways to support herself in old age, getting rid of a domestic violence problem, and handling a lost love gone awry are all part of Maud’s outrageous plans, as she figures no one would ever consider someone her age as a suspect in foul play. Maud isn’t like your sweet little granny, unless, of course, your granny has a passion for taking out people that annoy her!

Eureka PLD has copies of both An Elderly Lady is Up to No Good, and An Elderly Lady Must Not Be Crossed.
