

Splatter

Diane Alber

Source: EPLD

Splatter is about a crew of paint splatters (in the primary colors of Red, Blue and Yellow) who always play alone. One day, Red suggests they should try to play together to see what would happen which sounds exciting to all of them. However, this doesn't go well at all the first time around. A pep talk from Red ensues, they make a second go of it, and something wonderful happens. This book is great for children who are trying to learn teamwork in addition to their primary and secondary colors. The back of this book also contains a Next Steps list of activities that a teacher or parent can do with their children to build off the concepts taught in the book.

This book is new this year to the Children's Library and is part of the 'Scribble Series' where art like characters tell stories to teach basic life lessons....like Teamwork! EPLD also carries 'A Little SPOT Series' by the same author which are emotional learning books (confidence, kindness, anger, etc.) Finally, EPLD also carries the 'Never Let a' series for all those who love to use their imagination when it comes to dinosaurs and unicorns.
