

Fallen by Linda Castillo

This is another installment of one of my favorite characters, Kate Burkholder, written by Linda Castillo. This is the 13th book in this series and in this one again, Chief of Police, Kate finds herself up against a murder investigation in her small town at Painter's Mill that she must solve. In this book, we get more of a glimpse into Kate's past and Amish upbringing. Kate is healing from the things that have happened to her in the past and her relationship with John Tomasetti is growing as well. We look deep into the Amish life and also see a little more of the other characters' lives that work at the station as well. I always try to figure out the murder early and this author never fails to always have a twist or an ending that keeps me in complete suspense! These books can be read as a stand-alone, but if you have not read the whole series, I suggest starting with book one.
