

The Midnight Library* by Kazuno Kohara

The librarian at the Midnight Library is a little girl with pigtail braids and her assistants are three owls. The patrons of the library are a variety of different animals, everything from cats to sheep to foxes to tortoises.

This is hands-down one of the cutest picture books that I've ever had the pleasure of reading. The art is simple, with just a color palette of golden yellow, blue, black, and white. And while the story is short, it concisely depicts the fact that libraries provide a lot of different services, not just quiet places to read. I really enjoyed that the library was bustling and shown as a community hub for the animals. Overall just a lovely little book!

GK